Director of Worlds of Words

This initiative was established to create an international network of people who share the vision of bringing books and children together, opening windows on the world. We encourage thoughtful dialogue around international literature so that children can reflect on their own cultural experiences and connect to the experiences of others across the globe. This work is guided by a Board of Advisors, located throughout the U.S. and world, who work to:

- promote intercultural understanding and global perspectives.
- identify excellent culturally authentic literature about children's lives around the world.
- provide resources for adults who share a passion for connecting readers with books.
- share stories of children's dialogue and interactions around international literature.
- encourage the integration of international literature into the curriculum.

Scholarly and community activities

- International Collection of Children's and Adolescent Literature with 30,000 books
- Open to the public for reading and browsing on a daily basis
- Sponsor scholarly forums on global and multicultural issues in children's and adolescent literature
- Host visiting scholars from universities throughout the U.S. and the world
- Host college faculty events and community events
- Professional development for teachers and librarians
- Field trips by classrooms for engagements within the collection
- Saturday WOW Book Fiestas for children with authors and illustrators
- Language and Culture Book Kits that highlight particular global cultures and are available for a month-long loan to schools. Also includes visits by international consultants.
- Family Story Backpacks are taken into K-3 classrooms each semester by preservice teachers
- Cultural Community Story Boxes are taken into Preschool classrooms each semester by preservice early childhood teachers

Web-based activities

- Web site with free resources for educators, accessed by educators from over 170 countries
- WOW Stories – online peer-reviewed journal of vignettes by educators to share their use of global literature in their classrooms
- WOW Review – online peer-reviewed journal of book reviews of children's and adolescent literature from global or multicultural settings with a focus on cultural authenticity.
- WOW Currents – weekly blog on current issues in global literature
- WOW Books – on-line searchable data base of global children's and adolescent literature
- Resources and book lists
- Global Literacy Communities – small grants to 12 literacy communities each year to support their integration of global literature into their curriculum and their work as a study group. Members-only forum to support these groups. On-line publication of their work.
